ONCE UPON A TIME, a racecar driver named Gordon was recovering from a traumatic brain injury.

EVERY DAY, he worked incessantly to return to the track, but was denied medical clearance and was banned from competition indefinitely.

UNTIL ONE DAY, he received the helmet and gloves from his father's fatal accident, as well as an invitation to a festival in Belgium to compete at the abandoned racetrack that took his life.

BECAUSE OF THAT, he accepts the invitation and is ushered into the village by a man named Virgil, where he and 33 other drivers are worshiped as gods.

BECAUSE OF THAT, the 3-day festival begins, harrowing races ensue, and inexplicable tragedies unfold. The very soil of the village itself appears to be feeding on the bloodshed.

BECAUSE OF THAT, Gordon uncovers an insidious truth: the drivers have been brought in as ritual sacrifices to appease the bloodthirsty appetite of the dark entity they worship. He tries to escape the cursed village but gets betrayed by Virgil and is captured.

UNTIL FINALLY, after putting on his father's helmet and seeing his soul being tortured in the underworld, Gordon engages in a climactic race against the dark entity and sacrifices himself to defeat the evil spirit. He manages to lift the curse off the village, freeing the souls of all the other drivers who died there

AND EVER SINCE THAT DAY, Spa-Francorchamps has returned to her former glory, and Gordon lived with his father, reunited in the spirit realm. purpose.
